Word from Mama Charity Home ...

Sarah Wakadala,
(Foster Mother)

Dear esteemed friends, are you in a Christmas mood like me, am very much sure you are’ may be am reminding you to begin preparing for the festive season. Well, I recently realized that “To be a Mother , is to be Like a Farmer” ha ha ha!

I actually can’t imagine it is a true statement, somebody I shared it with, said in her words that “ for sure to be a mother is to be a farmer because whenever the farmer leaves the garden with crops without weeding it, actually the weeds will grow and overwhelm the crops” Now I see that you are in agreement with me, for dear friends who have families I think you get the point faster, for friends who do not have families I can say you are yet to taste the goodness of a family yes its really fun!!!!

At Charity Home, it is only progress it is 3rd term and the children are getting promoted to next classes bravo to, my dear friends you are changing and can still shape the future of these children with your support, well am giving you a red carpet invitation to Charity Home ‘you will go back younger than you came’
KIND REGARDS TO YOU

It’s 3rd Term Again oohh...

Joel says I need to work hard to be promoted to the next class, he says I must work hard and pass my exams, first wait oh oh oh we have candidates Frank joins Secondary and David joins University next year , actually they read their books day and night, at night it is reading with their feet in a basin of water to avoid dozing ha ha hah ha!!!!!!

MANANA PETER (Foster Parent)

Hi Friends,

Its lunch time and am enjoying a plate of Malewa(Bamboo) and Matooke(Bananas) and of course Posho(corn meal), I send you an electronic share of my food now!!!!. Don't mind when you visit us there is a lot of interesting African Food! Well this year has been really great as you can see the children are going to school with tuition paid and I think it has also enabled them to settle and read their books without being interrupted by the school authorities, what we require from the children is for them to perform excellently and be promoted to the next classes, sometimes I look back where these children have been and how their parents were unable to take them to school, I assume they would have joined wrong groups in the community and perhaps become street children or society rejects. My dear friends me and you believe that it is more serious with the girls in Africa when a girl is not in school she must be taken for marriage, but you find that even when they are in school some parents who are hungry for money would give their daughters to rich men for bride wealth, therefore every sponsor of Kwa Moyo is doing great work in building the future of these children who would otherwise have turned into society rejects.

The Kwa Moyo Farm at Bududa.

It is actually the season of coffee this October and November which is the harvesting period up to January, the Arabica coffee in the Elgon/Mbale region is actually the best quality in Uganda and consumed around the world. On the other hand the Onions are undergoing weeding, because actually these onions demand enough effort before harvesting compared to other green crops. Soon around January and February, the onions will be ready for harvesting. The only challenge is that when the season is a bit dry the yield actually reduces, and sometimes necessitates irrigation. With Mara acquiring for us the organic agriculture methods book, am sure better farming practices will be used to even other crops so that we reduce on the budget for food at Charity home and the education centre in the near future. The funds towards the farm rent have actually given the project a good start within a period of the next two seasons after establishing the output of the farm then perhaps it will be self sustaining.

Kirabo Precious (Miss Charity Home)

From the recent completed Miss Charity Home Contest, Kirabo Precious emerged the winner and this was her maiden speech.

"Hi ladies and Gentlemen, it has been six score years since I joined Charity Home and I can say no regrets, and for sure your support towards my plight as a girl to have a good education foundation, I can't imagine this far I have reached' Bravo to my dear sponsors. Even the victory tonight is a symbol of success which is ahead of me, to my runners up just stick to Charity Home the sky is the limit, asante sana, thank you so much, danke sehr, to my Judges (Kwa Moyo family)."

Well at this point, this young girl is up to something, I have even lost words any way continue sending her your votes and support for this time Miss Uganda.

2014-Cultural Year for Mbale/Elgon Region.
(Peter on Culture)

Ladies and Gentlemen, 'this is a secret just whisper to a friend to find out whether there is a Gishu-lumasaba/Mbale born gentleman hiding in your area, text his name to me and I will make him appreciate his culture. Just joking anyway'.

You need to be around and see these guys' dancing and singing as if there is no tomorrow in the name of initiating young boys to manhood through circumcision in the presence of elders in other words trying to show that one is now responsible and perhaps ready to marry, it's really interesting but to the elites it is a bit mild but to the people in the villages it is to the extreme, that you have to face a live knife, sorry if it is a bit harsh to you but it's the fact and the most liked part of the ceremony is the dancing and drinking local brew for about 2 weeks when these boys are being moved around their relatives to assure them that one is moving to the next level, with which gifts would be given such as cattle, chicken and money. Come to Mbale you will enjoy.

Just imagine how long this meal will get ready, not peeled, not in a sauce pan !!! Anyway it is an ordinary barbecue.

Enjoy these funny phrases'

1. A Lifetime

A man walked into a tax revenue branch office and sat down and smiled at everyone. "may I help you?" said the officer in charge. "No," said the man. "I just wanted to meet the people I have been working for all these years".

2. After the Boss's Job

The boss was having a talk with the latest recruit to the office staff. "I run a tight ship here. I want men who are efficient, conscientious and hardworking," he said. "Well, sir," said the new recruit, "I think you will find I always give of my very best at all times." "That's what everyone says when they start," said the boss. "But how long will you continue to do your best" the new recruit replied, "I suppose, until I've got your job.

3. "A man is not finished when he is defeated. He is finished when he quits." Richard M. Nixon
